THE LOST NOTE IN THE CHURCH

WAS TEXT OF SERMON AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

BUSINESS AND RELIGION

Are Fully Compatible—"Be Not Slothful," Says Rev. W. P. Christy of English Lutheran Church.

Yesterday morning at the Presbyterian church Rev. Langhin in his sermon, "A Lost Note in Church Life," spoke of the tendency in this day and age to get away from the real things that should be in church and Christian life, and to bring into the church too much of the social side.

The text of the lesson was taken from the second chapter of Paul's second epistle to Timothy.

In those verses, said Rev. Langhin, is given a clear and definite definition of the Gospel as Paul understood it. Those words are in keeping with the words which the Lord spoke, as "I am come to seek and save that which was lost," and his words to Nicodemus, "For God so loved the world that He gave His only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

As we study these passages they give us two propositions, that seem to be the basis of all the early acts in the Testament. The world needs a Savior and Christ is that Savior. There is a very little said about education or philosophy or the science of living. Just that Christ was come into the world to save men.

Based on the teachings of the disciples in all the known world, into the Roman Empire, saturated with heathenism, the disciples came with the Gospel, as a flaming torch. These two things are fundamental in all movements of reform.

These two principles are not very greatly emphasized in our life today. The preacher is not supposed to give anything but a sermon but will interest the people, newspaper and scrap, not about sin and future punishment, nor about heaven, because men are supposed to make good on earth. Neither are they supposed to talk on immortality because there are some who do not believe in a future life.

The church life of today seems to rest more on the social side of life, on fraternal and club, and everything except that which is necessary to the life of a Christian man. Frivolity seems to have crept in. We laugh at the state, the family and all other institutions that should be regarded seriously. Lettishness seems to prevail everywhere. Nobody is on fire with enthusiasm, nobody is aroused, not one is stirring things for the cause of Christ. This is true of all churches as much as it is of one. When Hannibal went into winter quarters his strength became rapped and he became vulnerable to the enemy. It was not the long hard march over the Alps that weakened his strength, but the unrelenting sameness of his winter quarters made the general a victim to an enemy which overcame him.

It appears that the church has gone into winter quarters. In the first place we have become money-mad. It is the theme for newspaper editorials and for magazine articles and we have become so absorbed in getting and accumulating that we have not time for anything else.

The liberal tendency of our theology has made us shift our standards of life. We have changed our theology and because we have shifted our standards of living. We are not stirred or servers of the things that were once supposed to make a good religious life.

What is the work and scope of the Gospel? The Gospel is a message of good news and good things. It is good news, in the first place, in reference to God. In Old Testament times men feared and dreaded God. Their religion was based on the idea that something must be done to placate God. But Christ brought into the world a new conception, the thought that God is a Father.

The Gospel is good news in reference to life. Jesus came that men might have life.

The third place the Gospel tells of the deliverance from sin. It tells how we may live that we will be delivered from sin. The Old Testament part always tells of the time when (sin) would be changed. The climax of the teachings of the Old Testament is reached in the New Testament, where Jesus says, "This, my blood, is shed for the remission of sin."

There was no doubt in the Hebrew mind as to the meaning of this. Jesus meant this, "It is my life that I give to dispel the sin of life in you."

What is the effect of that? How can we get the mastery of ourselves? Simon Peter before he came into contact with Christ was an unstable and unclean man. Now Simon Peter came into contact with Jesus Christ and began to study Him and saw what a noble man He was. Then the transforming process began, and the man became as firm as a rock. John, in the beginning, although he seldom thought of him in that way, was ambitious and intolerant. So intolerant was he that when a village in which the Apostles wanted to abide would not receive them, John wished to burn it. But he also came to understand something of the life of Jesus and the intolerant man became tolerant. Somehow he got an understanding of the better life and hundreds were won to Christ by his preaching. The transformation always comes when a man sees the life Jesus lived in the world. These men were outwitted, as many other great followers of Christ were, before they became influenced by his life. The Lord, however, did not deal entirely with outlaws. The Lord dealt more with the sin of the mind than those of the body. He thought the sin of the mind were more despicable than those of the body. The purpose of Jesus Christ was to bring men into harmony with God by showing them how to live. Will we not see that we wonder who has secured to our fellow-men by inspiring them to live better lives?

That the present-day commercialism and egotism is fully compatible with a life of service to the Lord was the novel message of the Rev. W. P. Christy in a sermon delivered at the English Lutheran church yesterday morning. His text was taken from the twelfth chapter, eleventh verse, of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans: "Be not slothful in business—fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

"There is," said the Rev. Mr. Christy, "a prevalent belief that some vocations afford more means than others for serving the Lord—that there is a difference in callings. It is commonly thought that men who are commercially engrossed cannot therefore be religious. This is wrong. Whether your life-work lies in iron or in leather or in wool, you ought to bend all your energies to the accomplishment of the text says, 'be not slothful in business—be fervent in spirit.'"

"Whatever God has given us for our work, let no man call it common or unclean. Permeate your daily toil with that fervent spirit and saturate it with the atmosphere of a heart that is given to God."

"A man must live his life instead of theorize about it. A man cannot become a sailor by studying charts. He cannot become a soldier or a jockey by only going to a military academy or a naval school. Until he has been tried in the actual campaign—until he has been put to the test—he is but a schoolboy."

"Religion in life is an analogous matter. It is only a theoretical religion if the man does not live it out in his vocation. If he is religious only when he meditates, or prays only when at divine service, or moral only when he is in God's house—then he is not as holy as Paul making tents."

"Some of us who are neither patient in tribulation nor fervent in spirit say to ourselves: 'When we become old or incapable of working as strenuously as now, then we shall have more time for religion.' But they do not realize that if they have not religion now, they will not have it in the eve of life."

"It does not consist in moping for hours over a Bible, nor does it consist in writing a hymn. One cannot necessarily attribute piety to a person who at stated intervals devotes a few hours to church services. We should infuse our piety into our calling—there is no need to be neglectful of our calling. It is not necessary to be slothful in business in order to serve the Lord. Let me admonish you—let me beseech you, that honor lies in taking pride in success. For success is true honor. If a man has a humble heart and is successful without that is true honor and true success, and they are hallowed in God's sight."

PAID CRYSTAL. The Rev. W. P. Christy, pastor of the English Lutheran church, delivered a sermon on the text, "Be not slothful in business—fervent in spirit, serving the Lord," at the English Lutheran church yesterday morning. His text was taken from the twelfth chapter, eleventh verse, of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans.

INTERESTING TO LOVERS OF BIRD

LIFE IN AND ABOUT JANESVILLE THESE COLD DAYS.

HALVOR SKAVLEM'S TALK

Through Kindness of Mr. Skavlem The Gazette is Able to Print His Lesson on Native Birds.

Even in these cold winter months, when snow covers the fields and the trees are bereft of leaves, interest in bird life is not wanting. The feathered songsters that delight the eye and ear during the spring and summer months, have left some representatives in the frozen north while they flitted away to the southland and with warm winds.

Through the kindness of Mr. Halvor Skavlem, the Gazette is able to print an interesting bit of bird lore that comes from his own personal observation and study of bird life in and about Janesville. It will be followed with a second article from the same source in a day or two and should prove most welcome reading.

In order to gain any knowledge of value in the study of nature, the essential qualification is the ability to pursue an accurate, critical habit of observation.

Every student and trained observer lives in a world of his own, differing from that of his friends and associates in so far as their tastes and inclinations may vary.

The trained mechanic of architecture, the window or wall, he they in a fraction of an inch out of plumb. His sense of symmetry is stored in the keystone of an arch, and a trifle out of proportion. Due to training in habits of observation along these lines he sees things that are to the untrained eye unseen.

An entomologist will sit for hours in the hottest August sun and, to the uninitiated, be apparently staring at the bare ground—this he repeats day after day, perhaps year after year, until in time he brings out a most interesting account of what he has seen. It may be an account of an ant, a bee, a solitary wasp or spider, or any creeping thing whatsoever.

To us he reveals a new world, and shows us traits of insect life that are simply marvelous.

The botanist greets old friends and makes the acquaintance of new ones at every step he takes. "This plant that is 'risky weed' and 'trouble-maker' to his neighbors, are to him weapons of beauty."

And the bird-lover, more so than any other student of natural history, finds his friends by learning to see things. Here, there, and everywhere—with the architect he climbs the tallest building in the city and, let there are his friends—the home of the night hawk—in the old, abandoned chimneys, his friends are colonized by the hundred. With the botanist he greets them in the fern-fringed glen, in the tops of the highest trees, in the densest bush, in bog and fen, on land and sea—high in air and everywhere—his looks—his reason are there.

The reason about Janesville is of particular interest to a bird student. There are few places in the country where bird life is so manifold as in southern and eastern Wisconsin. The pioneer Wisconsin ornithologist, the late Dr. Hay of Racine, said more than thirty years ago:

"The betterment of the country north in summer and return farther south in winter than is the case east of the Great Lakes. This physical condition will sufficiently explain the remarkable peculiarities of Wisconsin's annual life—the overlapping, as it were, of two distinct faunas. More especially is this true of birds that are not to change their locality with great facility. It is doubtful if there is another locality where the Canadian Jay and its congeners visit in winter, or another where the mockingbird, the hawk-like flies silently over the spot occupied during the warmer days by the summer red-bird and the yellow-browed chat. But the axo has already leveled much of the woods, so there is perceptibly a falling off in the number of our old familiar friends."

We care little of the past. But what of the present? Most of you will say that the birds are all gone—at least in the city. Sparrows, you will say, are about all there is left.

Unquestionably, some of our old friends are gone and never to return. I fear that are not many of us so busy looking for other things that we fail to see but a small part of what treasure we have left. We hold doors so close to our eyes that it is difficult to see anything else.

Our grain and seed eating birds have suffered the greatest decrease. This is not, as is generally claimed, due to the bad boy who steals birds' eggs. Nor is it due to the hawk, the owl, the weasel, the skunk, or the fox, whose natural rights to a meal of fur and feathers is unquestionable—nor even to that least excusable destroyer, the sportsman and hunter, who too often kills wantonly, sometimes for the mere lust for killing something, or to exhibit his skill as a destroyer.

The radical changes and almost total destruction of the native seed and fruit-bearing plants of the country are unavoidable and are incidental to the changes from a wild to a civilized country. I see with the birds.

The fact that the food supply of our winter birds has enormously decreased and at times almost totally cut off is evident to the most careless observer. It is a well known fact that the strength of a cable is equal only to its weakest part, and that the rope, made of a cord, is equal only to its weakest section thereof. So it is that in all distributions of life, continuity can never exceed the lowest ebb of its food supply.

Let us go back thirty or forty years or so and see what our winter birds had to live upon. Almost every pasture had its cluster of briar patches and hazel brush so thick that a rabbit scarcely could make passage through them. The many berries, the wild grapes, the shrubs, the vines loaded with sundry fruits; then there were the hundreds and thousands of species of native seed-bearing plants—from the giant sunflowers whose dry stems served for "chickney sticks," down through the list of cornflowers, black-eyed asters, painted cups, hush clovers, nastur, golden-rods, and lupulum. Then there were thousands of acres of stubble fields, with here and there strips and patches of wheat grain. Cornfields were not always cut and shocked in those days. And when they were, they weren't often husked until the following Spring.

What are the conditions today? The old rail fences are gone, with their impenetrable hedges of brush and vine and weed. Intense farming utilizes every square rod of land, ninety per cent in bulk of our pasture, and hay plants consist of three species—only—timothy, clover and June grass—no one of which is allowed to seed unless the seed is gathered.

Even if quills and prairie-chickens could hibernate on snow, there would not be dead grass enough on an up-to-date farm to enable them to build their nests. With the smaller seed-eating winter birds the same conditions prevail. When we have a good covering of snow, they must either take flight, or be provided for by man.

In the case of our summer residents, the migratory birds, the situation is entirely different. Their food supply is unlimited generally, and when seasonal changes come, they seek "fresh" fields and pastures now. But the elimination of the briar-patch, the old hedge-fences and weed-patches, have driven even a good many of them to seek their summer homes in regions where the bush, the vine and the wild flowers still hold sway.

Now what can we do to encourage the birds in our cities? Well, there are many things that we could do, but I apprehend that there are very few things that we will do—except draw up the usual good-intentioned bird-protective legislation that is worth less than the paper it is printed upon. The first and all important question is: have we the necessary food supply? We will first consider the resident and hibernating grain and seed-eating birds—mostly all of these belong either to the great flock of sparrow family. They are the red-poll, the snow-birds, etc. All worn here late in the fall, looking for winter quarters. What did they find? Barren fields and close-shaved lawns and lawns—mowed pastures, with a goodly "hunch" of yawning tomatoes—and they "biked."

Now, unless we set apart bird parks—let the back-yard riot in weeds and banish the weed commissioner from all vacant lots and alleys—let the thistle and the hemp and the myrtle of other weeds have undisturbed right of possession—not unless we did that would these birds come back to us.

NO CELEBRATION FOR CHINESE NEW YEARS

Local Residents from the Celestial Empire to Omit Their National Holiday.

Janesville was not particularly impressed with the death of the Emperor of China—Kuang Hsu and Tze Hsi An last November, but it sounded the knell to any celebration of the Chinese New Year by the Chinamen of the world over. While Janesville has not a large population of Chinese, still the few that are here have always made merry on their New Year's, which falls this year on January 22. However, they will not fire off any fireworks this year—the death of the Emperor has placed a ban of mourning upon all celebrations for a year to come.

The occasion is peculiarly significant to Chinamen in that he must pay all debts and start in with a clean slate. Failure to do so is a rank disgrace. Slips of paper with inscriptions which mean the "Happy New Year" of America are on each door.

John feasts and makes merry. But not in 1929.

ENJOYED A BANQUET AT THE POSTOFFICE

Local Postal Employees Entertained the Line City Office Employees.

The banquet of the local clerks and carriers to the Beloit clerks and carriers was an exquisite success Saturday night in the Civil Service Examination room of the Janesville Post-office.

The tables were decorated with carnations and at each plate was a miniature mail pouch, the gift work of the Misses Dell Millmore and Alice Parmenter. The room, in deference to Uncle Sam, the banquet's common employer, was bedecked with flags and festooned with bunting.

Following the repast, which was served by C. D. Capelle and R. J. Bear, who were guided as blackface waiters, W. J. Leonard presided as toastmaster.

Speeches were made by Postmaster C. L. Valentine, L. E. Rosenthal, assistant postmaster at Beloit; Guy L. Webster, representing the Beloit clerks, and Fred A. Reschke, representing the Beloit clerks. A song was rendered by Chas. H. Patterson, who is well known for his ability to entertain. The Nelson orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

The banquet, which was a novel one, was arranged by the following committee: J. S. Hennings, assistant postmaster, chairman; W. J. Leonard, C. C. Capelle and R. J. Bear. The decoration committee consisted of J. P. Joyce and A. T. Mulder. On the entertainment committee were G. A. Kaempff, G. H. Powers and G. H. Patterson.

Those who received the guests were John G. Brown, R. E. Nelson, O. V. Henthorn, C. J. Hinkley and J. E. Granger.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH

This Offer Should Be a Warning To Every Man and Woman.

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable. The unfortunate serves as a warning to others.

Everyone who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach. Dyspepsia is caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices. There is one element missing. The absence of this destroys the function of the gastric fluids. They lose their power to digest food.

We are now able to supply the missing element—to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to make the stomach strong and well.

We know that Ilexal Dyspepsia Tablets will positively and permanently cure disordered stomachs, indigestion and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result. Price, 25 cents. Only at our store or by mail. Smith Drug Co.

TO FIGHT TO FINISH

Decision of the Association of Hat Manufacturers.

WILL DEMAND THE OPEN DOOR

Striking Union Workers Are Accused by Their Employers of Violating Their Agreement and Acting in an Unfair Manner.

New York, Jan. 18.—If the Hat Manufacturers' association sticks to the decision reached yesterday at a meeting to consider the strike that began Friday, the price of hats will go up and the fight with the union will be carried on to the finish. The employers will insist on the open shop.

Twelve members, comprising the board of directors of the association, attended the meeting. President Samuel Mundheim, who was in the chair, made the announcement after the meeting that the manufacturers had decided for the open shop and were prepared to fight to a finish. He said the number of strikers was between 15,000 and 20,000, but that there were many non-union hatters out of employment, and that eventually the places of the strikers would be filled.

Say Workers Were Not Fair.
"The manufacturers feel that they have not been treated fairly," he said. "The strikers should have given us notice, according to their agreement, and the action should have been taken by a vote of the union."

Mr. Mundheim, in discussing the discontinuance of the union label by the manufacturers, which precipitated the strike, said:

"The label is of no advantage to the manufacturers and, indeed, is not wanted. Very few people who buy hats notice whether the label is in them or not."

The manufacturers' president ridiculed the report that the union had $400,000 with which to make the fight. He said, however, that the hatters' union was one of the strongest labor organizations in the country.

Claim Violation of Agreement.

A statement was issued by the manufacturers containing parts of the working agreement entered into with the union. This was done, the statement contended, in order to set at rest any misunderstanding regarding the attitude of the manufacturers' association. The agreement in effect was that there should be no stoppage of work until a final decision of arbitrators had been rendered and that the union label should not be removed until due notice is given the manufacturers.

"The United Hatters of North America," the statement concludes, "has grantedly violated the foregoing articles by withdrawing the men and refusing the use of the union label to the Geyer Hat Company, one of our members, without notice. Upon their refusal to restore the label and the men to the Geyer Hat Company the Manufacturers' association, by a unanimous vote, directed all their members to discontinue the use of the union label in all their factories. The order was not intended to change any other existing condition agreement with scale wages between the manufacturers and their employees."

Burgess returned the fire, and several of the passengers came to his assistance. Quinn, after emptying his pistol, leaped from the train and escaped. During the fusillade, one of the passengers, Irvin Bransfield, of Mulberry, Ark., received what is believed will prove a fatal wound. Burgess was uninjured, and continued to Little Rock, where he placed his prisoner in the custody of the military authorities.

EDGAR ALLAN POE'S ROOM IN COLLEGE.

Poe's college career, while it lasted only one term, furnishes us with many side lights on America's premier poet and short story writer, whose one hundredth birthday was celebrated on January 19. During that time he made himself well known as a careful and thorough student and a frequent contributor to the college papers. There is no foundation for the oft-repeated rumor that Edgar Allan Poe was expelled from the university. At the time he was in college no degrees were awarded and for this reason Poe never received a degree from the university. His work was of a high order, especially as regards the languages, in which he was greatly interested.

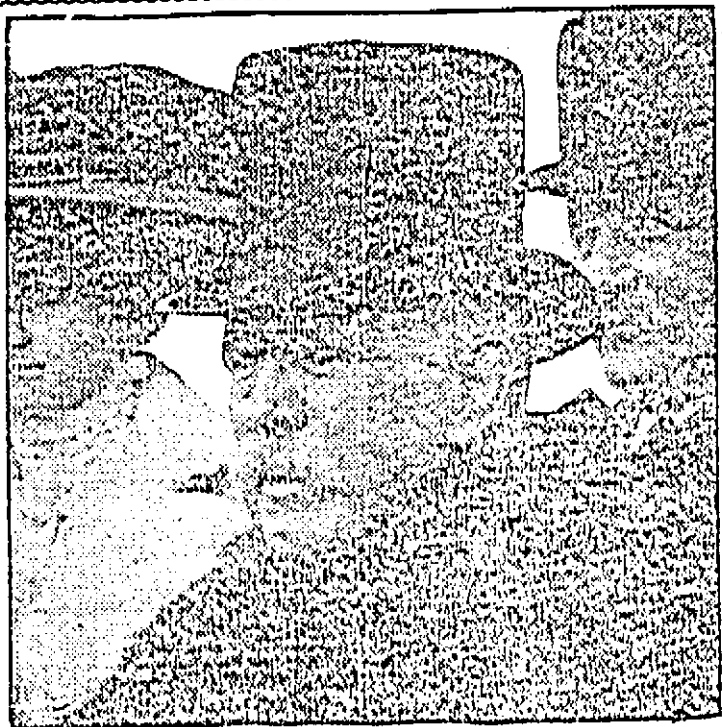

The university has prepared a fitting celebration for this hundredth anniversary of one of its most illustrious alumni.

The celebration will be not merely local, but national, and even international, in its character. The program as at present worked out provides the following items:

No. 13 West Range, the room designated by a little bronze tablet as "the small home of a great poet" will be opened as a museum. This museum will be kept open from January 18 to 25 inclusive. In it will be collected not only all of the mementos of Poe available in the University of Virginia, but also such as may be borrowed for this interesting occasion. On Monday evening, January 18, the Raven society, the undergraduate honor society of the University of Virginia, named from the most celebrated poem of the university's most celebrated poet, will have charge of the local celebration.

While the program for this evening is not fully elaborated it will include musical rendition of some of Poe's poems, an organ interpretation of "The Raven," illustrated recitations of "Rattrap" and a short address from a distinguished Virginia speaker. On Tuesday morning the celebration will take an international turn. There will be an address in French by Dr. Allen Fortier of New Orleans on Poe's influence on French literature, and an address in English by Prof. George Edward, recently of Munich Germany, on Poe's influence on German literature. In addition to these two speeches there will be continental tributes both in prose and poetry. At this meeting the chairman of the committee of arrangement, Dr. Chas. W. Kent, will preside. On Tuesday evening the president of the university, Dr. L. A. Alderman, will make a brief introductory address and will then present to the audience Prof. Barrett Wendell of Harvard university, well known in America and Europe as an accomplished scholar and interesting speaker. In addition to this address from this talented New Englander there will also be an address by a distinguished southern student of Poe's life and letters. At this evening meeting tributes from England and America, both in prose and poetry, will be read.

A number of distinguished literary men and women will be especially invited to the interesting occasion and all who honor the memory of this from the most celebrated poem of the American genius will be gladly welcomed.

Advertising Is News

Advertising is news pure and simple, and the very best advertisers have come to recognize that fact.

If during the year you receive four or twenty-four new things before you put the price on them you should spread the news. If your goods have particular merit the news of the fact should be spread through the community. If your price is lowest the people would be glad to know it, and you would find it profitable to tell them.

Any man who declares a disbelief in advertising writes himself down an ass. There are those who profess not to believe in advertising, but with most of these it is a matter of money—false economy often practiced to the detriment of the business or profession they are in.

Advertising is a positive creative force. The world would lost much without it. It multiplies human wants, intensifies human desires, encourages constant change, leads people to dress better, makes fashions, to build better homes, to furnish them in better taste, to make them more comfortable and sanitary.

Advertising leads people to indulge in luxuries in their homes and so raise the standard of living as to make what are luxuries in one decade necessities in the next.

Advertising encourages the eating of pure foods, the drinking of better teas, coffees, caccas, beers and wines.

Advertising stimulates the desire for better apparel, thus creating a demand that would not otherwise exist, increasing production, at the same time elevating the taste and culture of the community.

Advertising creates a desire for beautiful and substantial furnishings, thus educating the people to know the historical significance of various designs and color schemes, and leading them to furnish homes artistically, harmoniously and intelligently, and through this refining them.

Advertising has led the masses to put into their homes splendid musical instruments, thus advancing the taste for good music to an extent that would not have been accomplished otherwise.

The very fact that advertising often tempts people to spend money and leads to extravagance is its best defense, because it lifts us out of the ruts, enthralls and encourages us to make greater efforts, improves our condition and thus compels progress.

If you are interesting in knowing just how advertising can be applied profitably to your particular business our ad-man will be glad to call on you with a fund of knowledge on the subject. The cost of advertising is as follows:

100 inches used in one year	$ 20.00
300 inches used in one year	54.00
500 inches used in one year	75.00
1000 inches used in one year	125.00

INTERESTING LOCALLY

In view of the fact that Janesville may some day be connected with the great Mississippi waterway to the Gulf of Mexico and the harbors along its great stream, the action of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress at its recent national convention in Washington will be of interesting reading. The national congress accepted the general challenge that no concrete proposition had been submitted to the congress of the United States for the development of the nation's rivers and harbors and the canals that are being urged as a necessity and went on record by favoring a bond issue of $500,000,000 for the new waterway improvements, and authorizing the appointment of a committee by President Joseph E. Ransdell, of which he should be chairman, to draft a measure providing for such a loan, the issue became squarely joined.

With regard to the step thus taken it is but fair to those who are opposed to such a loan to say that the most earnest advocates of a bond issue do not expect the money to be borrowed at once, nor to be expended at once, but instead, used as needed, covering a period of years, the expenditure of the money to be provided by congress.

At the close of the war, August, 1865, the interest-bearing debt was $2,380,000,000, the annual interest charge thereon being $143,000,000. In 1892 the interest-bearing indebtedness of the government was $585,000,000 with an annual interest charge of $23,000,000.

The principal of our interest-bearing debt was increased during the years 1893-1897 by $262,315,000, this being made necessary for the purchase of gold to redeem greenbacks, and treasury notes presented for redemption within that period of time.

In 1898 the principal of the debt was increased $188,000,000 to secure funds to prosecute the Spanish-American war and under the act authorizing the construction of the Panama canal the debt has been increased by loans aggregating $81,215,340, making the total interest-bearing debt on January 1, 1909, $912,990,840. This is all we have got in interest-bearing bonds since the beginning of the government, the government having reduced the interest-bearing debt from $2,380,000,000 to $585,000,000 between 1865 and 1892. The annual interest-bearing charge has correspondingly reduced to $23,000,000.

Up to the Civil war, there were two authorizations of loans, one for 6 per cent bonds, the other for 5 per cent bonds, aggregating $64,775,591, the great increase in the indebtedness of the United States having grown out of the Civil war, the redemption from 1893 to 1897, the Spanish-American war and the building of the Panama canal.

The authorization of bonds does not seem to have worried the people of the United States to any alarming extent for their representatives in congress with decided unanimity voted the Panama canal issue and will vote for other issues as they become convinced of their needs. And they will be convinced of their needs by the disclosure of practical enterprises in the interest of the people.

The practical point in the problem of inland waterway improvements is that something shall be done to bring reduced transportation charges to the producing sections of the country. The burden or benefit of a bond issue must be decided from the purpose of its issue, just mortgages. If any debt is incurred in the winning of profits it may be regarded as a wise business policy. In this manner railroads have been built, great manufacturing establishments have been erected and large business enterprises have made centers of activity out of the wilderness and built cities. If in like manner the people of the United States can by a loan of $500,000,000 open the inland waterways to safe and easy transportation thereby securing untold commercial benefits, it might with entire propriety be asked would not the end to be attained justify such a pledge in view of the comprehensive policy of waterway treatment so strongly urged by the National Rivers and Harbors congress?

RULES FOR CUBAN CONGRESS

Whether the Cuban congress hereafter will be legally competent to repeal and amend the decrees and laws which have been promulgated by the American provisional governor is a question which it is not necessary to consider at this time and which it is sincerely to be hoped it will never be necessary to consider, at any rate in a more academic way. There are moral and patriotic obligations which transcend technical rights and powers, and those, reinforced with all the weight of costly experience and humbling chastisement, should prevail in Cuba without a thought of hesitation or challenge.

This may be said concerning all the fundamental principles of good government which Mr. Magoon has wisely established in Cuba, but concerning none of them it is to be said more earnestly than of his latest decree providing for the efficiency of the insular congress and guarding against any such untoward and disgraceful paralysis of governmental functions as that which marked the close of President Pinar's administration. To some it may seem a technical derogation of the dignity of a congress to decree that its members shall perform their duties, and perhaps even it might be exaggerated into seeming to imply an imputation that they were inclined to shirk their duties. Yet we do not know that the ancient command "Thou shalt not steal" is generally resented as a suggestion that all men are disposed to be thieves.

What would be the alternative to this decree of Governor Magoon? The tacit assumption that members of the Cuban congress were to be free to neglect their duties with impunity and still to draw full salaries, and that they individually, or collectively, might defeat the purposes of government and plunge the insular administration into chaos again and that there should be no power to restrain them from that course. It is to our mind inconceivable that thoughtful and patriotic Cubans should insist upon so fatuous and ruinous a policy. The decree which Governor Magoon has wisely and benevolently promulgated is no more stringent than the laws which prevail here for the control of our own congress, and we must expect that it will not be resented and repudiated by Cuba, but will be welcomed and cherished as one of the essential safeguards of constitutional government.

WHISTLER AND FREE ART

James H. McNeill Whistler, a collection of whose works Mr. Charles L. Prosser has recently presented to our National Gallery, was one of the greatest artists and certainly the most original artistic genius whom America has produced, and yet he lived in this country for only fifteen years of his life, and those were the years of his youth.

He was once asked when he was coming back to America, and his reply was, "When the duty on art is removed."

A few years ago, when his paintings and etchings were being collected by the Copsey society for an exhibition, he was appealed to for assistance, but refused, saying: "God bless me! why should you hold an exhibition of pictures in America? The people do not care for art."

"How do you know? You have not been there for many years."

"How do I know? Why, haven't you a law to keep out pictures and statues? Is it not in black and white that the works of the great masters must not enter America, that they are not wanted? A people that tolerate such a law has no love for art, their protestation is mere pretence."

That a great nation should deliberately discourage the importation of beautiful things was to him a mystery, as it is to nearly every one else. What difference does it make whether objects of beauty come out of the east or out of the west, so long as they add to the happiness and refinement of the people?

It is most remarkable that practically the only nation which discourages the importation of the beautiful happens to be the youngest and the richest of all, and the one most in need of what it willfully excludes. Happily, this mark of barbarism is soon to be erased by a congress which is disposed to give the fine arts their proper place in the nation.

Unless appearances are deceitful the present session of the state legislature promises to go down in history as one of the most expeditious and harmonious for many years past. The work has been started with a vim and the determination of making the session last but a hundred days is an evidence of the intention of making laws and not bickering in politics.

Roosevelt still has plenty of big sticks in pickle for bad congressmen and has until March 4th to use them on the members of the upper and lower house whom he sees turning from the straight and narrow path of truth and honesty. "Teddy" will not conso playing national policeman until he has to.

Janesville will soon be in the throes of a political campaign for local civic offices. It is to be hoped the best men will be induced to become candidates and not allow the offices to be filled by merely political applicants.

Down in Illinois, Senator Hopkins is still whittling to keep his spirits up, but for the life of him he could not tell you the time unless it had something to do with harmony and the Senatorship.

Pittsburg has no money to convict its hoodlums but some way or other it is getting down to the bottom of graft about as quickly as Frisco is.

About this time the old settler will clean off his Lincoln robes and get down the muddy files to tell of what happened when he knew the Great Emancipator.

Gentle and slowly the coast of the Panama canal is being broken upon the intellects of the American people. If it had come all at once it would never even have been contemplated.

Heart to Heart Talks.

THE REAL HONEYMOON.

Sometimes, as by a flash of lightning, a man's whole inner life is illumined in a single moment.

Francis J. Henry, the fearless reformer, was trying to send the municipal grafters of San Francisco to the penitentiary.

Shot by an assassin, he fell to the courtroom floor. He thought he was dying, and his first words to those who bent over him were these:

"Tell my wife I love her better than anything in the world."

It was no hollow youth speaking sentimentally. This was the utterance of a forceful, brimful man of mature life, the quick expression of a steady, undying affection.

Love for the woman who had stood by him all the years was the essential thing of his strenuous life.

The poets do not often sing of conjugal life.

They voice "the love of man for a maid" or contravise. Poetry is mostly of this sort of love, and this sort of love is mostly poetry. But the love of a man for his wife, the love of a wife for her husband, that is the love that abides. Sometimes, seemingly it may burn down to the embers; but, as in this incident of Henry, it is always ready to flame up again.

The world knows Francis Henry better now.

He has opened the door of his heart so that the world may see his hidden treasure, increasing love for a faithful wife.

The world better understands the secret springs of Henry's impassioned career.

The perennial source of this man's devotion to the public duty, the inspiration of all his sacrifices and labors, is the sweet woman behind his life.

Make this world just as hard and as callous and as mean as you may. Nevertheless the force that moves all things for good is not the force of head or hand. IT IS THE FORCE OF THE HEART.

The exceeding riches of the heart of things are revealed only when husband and wife have walked and worked together through the years allotted them, each leaning on the other, growing old together.

The real honeymoon ends only with death.

GRIMM HEARD MOTION IN SEWERAGE CASE

VALUABLE PEARL IS FOUND IN THE RIVER

John Young of Broadhead Pays $375 for It to a Local Fisherman.

Last Week.

That Rock river's bottom may be teeming in wealth and a hidden treasure ground for someone is demonstrated by the fact that during the past week John A. Young of Broadhead, who is known the country over as the most persistent pearl-buyer, paid a local fisherman $375 for a pearl which he secured from a clam taken from Rock river. Mr. Young said he could not give the man's name; in fact, did not know it, and was unable to state the exact location of the successful fisherman's find, but he was certain that the river near Janesville would, in the coming spring and summer, produce many valuable pearls if they were sought for. An investigation shows that the pearl in question was taken from the river just below the lower dam and until the tea came several smaller shells had been found in the same locality. Shells are not of much value, but still worth finding. Mr. Young is still in search of his perfect pearl. He offers fifty thousand dollars for a pearl which will weigh 102½ grains and over and be perfect. Recently he went to Alderman, N. Y., to examine a pearl the owner thought would answer the description, but it was not large enough. The pearl he bought last week he values at $500, which for a day's fishing is pretty good pay.

Miss Mayme Hewitt of Albany is visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Bailey.

Advice to Mothers.

Be positive with the children. Lay down the law. It is remarkable how soon they discover when you are in earnest. Do not go to the breakfast table in a hurry, but stop long enough to count 100 slowly, and then enter with a calm manner determining that there will be no squabbling. It is natural for the young animal to scarp, and while not criminal, still it must be checked to self-control.

Knowledge and Idleness.

It is no more possible for an idle man to keep together a certain stock of knowledge than it is possible to keep together a stock of ice exposed to the meridian sun. Every day destroys a fact, a relation, or an influence; and the only method of preserving the bulk and value of the pile is by constantly adding to it—wisely.

Try This Plan.

If you have an old bicycle pump around the house you can put it to good service when next you clean your sewing machine. Thin pieces of lint, threads and the like can be blown out of the crevices and the machine cleaned in much less time. An atomizer can often be used for the same purpose.

DENTAL CHAT

Have you in rambling in the woods ever stepped upon a fallen tree and had it cave in with you because its heart was eaten out with decay? It was hollow.

Just so will it be with your teeth if you neglect them.

My patients are continually saying to me:

"My teeth decay so rapidly."

"Why, it was only last week that I first noticed any trouble with them."

The truth was:

"This decay had been going on for years until the tooth was hollow and a wreck inside its enamel shell."

MABEL BACK IN HER OLD HOME THE JAIL

Released Here Friday Morning, She Is Picked Up in Beloit That Night and Sent to Jail for Ten Days.

Poor Mabel Lane is in trouble again. Arrested on Thursday evening last while in a condition due to application of beverage and dope, she told a pitiful tale of abuse and treatment by a local man and on her promise to get out of town was released by the local officers Friday afternoon. She took the car for Rockford, her home, but in some way became confused, sick and called it and got off in Beloit. Here she was promptly hauled in the city lock-up and Saturday afternoon Judge Rosen fined her three dollars and costs or ten days in jail. As her assets consisted of a bottle of "dope" and a half pint of whiskey she was brought up to visit Sheriff Scheffel for ten days. On the same car the Beloit officers brought L. Lightheart of Beloit, who had been convicted of stealing coal from a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul car. Lightheart's sentence is thirty days. It is said his family is in destitute condition and that he was taking the coal to keep them warm.

ELLSWORTH'S TRIAL HAS BEEN ADJOURNED

District Attorney Unable to Appear in Court and Case Was Laid Over Until Friday.

On account of being busy with the case of James Conroy, charged with setting fire to the barn of C. P. Bodewick in the town of Turtle, District Attorney Fisher was unable to appear in court this morning to file the information against Elmer Ellsworth, who is charged with having obtained $350 from Mrs. Kate Kennedy on false and fraudulent pretenses. Mr. Oestreich appeared in court in Mr. Fisher's place to arrange with the attorneys for the defense to fix on the date for the trial. On agreement of both attorneys, the day set for the trial was Friday morning at ten o'clock.

One Drunk.

Mike Connors, charged with drunkenness, who was on the verge of the delirium tremens was given ten days in the county jail this morning. He was given a choice of five days and a fine of $2.00 and costs amounting to $3.10, but was unable to pay and was given five days extra in the jail.

SAYS CRITICISM IS A VERY UNJUST ONE

Judge Ross of the Beloit Court Thinks He Was Not Fairly Treated by the County Board.

"Criticism coming from the members of the county board as private individuals I would not object to, but I do emphatically object to such attacks coming from the board as an official body. Courts and legislatures, of which the county board is one, are two separate and distinct departments of government and it would be vicious in the extreme to subordinate one to the other."

This statement this morning regarding the report made at the session of the board, The Judge said in his opinion the board had no more right to call him before the session and pass judgment upon his acts than he would have to call the members into his court and pass judgment upon them.

The judge said he had not been called before the special committee of investigation and had had no chance of stating his case.

"I could have asked to have had that report of the report hearing upon my conduct stricken out and I am desired," continued Mr. Ross, "but I do not consider that I was called upon to do so."

"I do not think the board to be unjust to me in this matter but nevertheless the report stands as a matter of record."

CONFESSED WHEN HE IS CLOSELY QUIZZED

Young Town of Turtle Boy Says He Set Fire to C. P. Bodewick's Barn in December.

Through the confession of James Conroy of the town of Turtle, the mystery which surrounded the destruction by fire of the large barn of C. P. Bodewick of the same town was cleared. The fire which destroyed considerable property was thought at the time to have been of incendiary origin and State Fire Marshal T. M. Purcell and Assistant Marshal Sommers of Madison, after a careful investigation, brought Conroy to Janesville late Saturday for an examination. Under the questioning, Conroy told of his part in the fire. Questioned as to his mental condition arising, he was not arraigned in Beloit as originally planned, but was brought to the county jail where an examination as to his sanity was held by Drs. Buckmaster and Pember this afternoon. Neighbors and relatives of Conroy are confident that he is not right mentally and his two brothers, Joseph Conroy and John Conroy, and a friend, D. Q. Stark, asked for a mental examination. Conroy alleged a grievance against Bodewick in telling his story to the fire marshal, but it is thought his mental condition is such that he will not be prosecuted for the crime of arson, which might otherwise be filed against him. Neighbors and friends of the family are in the city today to aid the unfortunate man if it is possible.

MUTUAL PROTECTION TO LOCAL MERCHANTS

Movement to Organize the Local Business Men of the City.

Mr. H. W. Woodcock, representing the Standard Chain & Traffic Bureau of Milwaukee, has been spending a few days in the city, in the interest of the local merchants for securing mutual protection from bad credits and better freight rates.

A number of local merchants and manufacturers hold memberships in this Bureau at present.

The advantages in the profits of many business men, caused by the institution to the transportation and is enormous, and can be avoided by the employment of this company.

All the different interests of the country are organized to protect themselves along these lines, except the retailers. The ordinary business man is entirely helpless in the running of a railroad tariff, which is a very complicated affair.

To save time, money and labor, the Standard Chain & Traffic Bureau was organized for the purpose of securing more consideration from the railways in the matter of freight rates. They maintain a Freight Checking Department in charge of expert railroad traffic managers in which all freight receipts will be checked over for errors in rates and classification, and all overcharges detected and claims collected.

This company is thoroughly equipped to attend to all these matters. The routing of goods absolutely controls the rates, and in many cases the rates can be reduced full one-half by proper routing. It is an important item to have correct rates quoted to merchants before they buy goods, as they frequently it is shown that they can buy much cheaper in some places where the freight rates apparently would be against it.

This company is powerful enough to seek better rates, and much of the complaint regarding rates would be obviated, if persons concerned were in a position to take advantage of low rates now in force. They act as General Freight and Traffic Managers, and furnish rates upon any commodity, and proper routing from any point in the United States to the place of business of their clients, and take care of all future business.

They have a complete file of Railroad Tariffs, employ expert rate men and are the largest Traffic Managers in the West.

The Standard Commercial Agency will act as a unit for members and do collecting of outstanding accounts, of every nature everywhere, bills, notes, rents, wages, board bills and outlaid accounts and judgments. Reports to members how people pay their bills.

This company was organized for the purpose of protection to manufacturers, merchants, professional men and the public in general, maintaining a force of skilled attorneys to render legal services, collect, adjust, litigate and furnish reports.

The offices of the company are located in the Merrill Bldg., 211 Grand Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

WATER COMPANY HAS AN OPINION ON FILE

Answers Attorney Maxfield's Letter Relative to Railway Rate Commission's Decision As to Meters.

In the following communication the Janesville Water company makes a formal answer to the letter of Atty. Maxfield relative to their right to charge for installing their right to published in Saturday's Gazette.

To the Editor:

The attention of the Water company was today called to the communication which appeared in Saturday evening's paper. Supl. Hyzer says that the case referred to in said communication has no application here. He presented the following opinion given to the Water company which is self-explanatory.

January 18, 1909.
Janesville Water Company:

We have examined the recent decision of the Railroad Rate Commission of Wisconsin relating to the city of Hudson.

The question involved in that case was the power of the city to charge a different rate for water consumed by consumers who owned their own water meters than was charged to consumers who did not own their own meters, and the commission held that the city ought to desist from making any such different charge.

It is our opinion that this decision in no way affects conditions at Janesville, because the rights and duties of the Janesville Water company are defined by its franchise, and the franchise contains provisions relating to the installation of meters and the charges for water whose meters are used. We have no doubt you should be governed entirely by the provisions of your franchise, and so long as you follow those no rightful complaint can be made against you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD M. HYZEL,
WILLIAM G. WIEGELER.

have a "staring domestic audience" for the imminent reconciliation his father told him was so necessary. Struggling his shoulders, he went quickly down the stairs to the library.

He had known exactly what he should see there—the vivid girl with the hue of light in her cheeks, the shaded lamp, the wheel chair and the feeble old man with his furrowed face and gray mustaches. What he himself should see he had not had time to reflect.

The figure in the chair looked up as the door opened. "Hugh!" he cried and half lifted himself from his seat. Then he settled back, and the sunken, indomitable eyes fastened themselves on his son's face.

Hugh was melodramatic—cheaply so. He saw the girl start at the name, saw her hands catch at the kimono to draw the folds over the bare white throat, saw the rich color that flooded her face.

He saw himself suddenly the moving hero of the story, the attractive force of the situation, the tears came to his eyes; tears of unselfish feeling, due partly to the cheap whiff he had drunk that day, whose outward consequences he had so drastically banished, and partly to sheer nervous exaltation.

"Father!" he said, and came and caught the giant hand that shook against the chair.

Then the deeps of the old man's heart were suddenly broken up. "My son!" he cried and threw his arms about him. "Hugh, my boy, my boy!"

Jessie waited to hear no more. Thrilling with gladness and flushing with the sudden recollection of her bare throat and feet, she slipped away to her room to creep into bed and to wide-eyed thinking.

What did he look like? Of his face she had never seen even a counterfeited presentment. Through what adventures had he passed? Now that he had come home, forgetting and forgiven, would he stay? He had been in his room when she entered it with the roses—must have guessed, if he had not already known, that she was blind.

Would he guess that she had cured for that room, had placed fresh flowers there often and often?

Since she had come to the house in the apoplexy, Jessie had found the imagined figure of Hugh a dominant presence in a horizon lightened with a throng of new impressions. The direct catastrophe of her blindness—it had been the sudden result of an accident—had fallen like a thunderbolt upon a nature elastic and joyous. It had brought her face to face with a revelation of mental agony, made her feel herself the hapless martyr of that curt thing called chance. She had always lived largely in books and pictures, and her world was still full of ideals and of brave adventures.

Gratitude had made her love the more old invalid with his crabbed temper, and the wandering son, choosing for pride's sake a resourceless battle with the world—the very mystery of his whereabouts—had taken strong hold of her imagination. Of the quarrel which had preceded Hugh's departure she had made her own version. That he should have come back on this very night, when the disinheritance she had dreaded had been so nearly consummated, seemed now to have an especial and an appealing significance.

Presently she rose, slipped on the red kimono, and taking a key from the pocket of her gown, stole from the room. She ascended a stairway and unlocked the door of a wide, bare attic where the moonlight poured through a skylight in the roof upon an unfinished statue. In this statue she had begun to fashion, in the imagined figure of Hugh, her conception of the prodigal son—not the battered and hunk filled wayfarer of the parable, but a figure of character and pathos, erring through youthful pride and spirit. The unfinished clay no eyes had seen, for those walls bounded her especial domain.

When Hugh went shamefacedly up the stair from the library the artificial glow that had tinged his finger tips had faded. The pulse of mind, the certitude of all the faculties of eye and hand that his key-bath had given him, were yielding. The penalties he had dislodged were returning re-ordered. He was rapidly becoming drunk.

He groped his way to his room, turned on the light, threw himself fully dressed upon the bed and slept the deep sleep of deferred intoxication.

STATUE OF ST. AGATHA, WHICH IS CARRIED THROUGH THE STREETS OF CATANIA AND PALERMO AND INVOKED AGAINST THE ERUPTIONS OF MT. ETNA.

St. Agatha, to the citizens of Catania, day let in to frighten the trembling and Palermo, is one of the most highly venerated martyr saints. Her particular significance at this time is in connection with the eruptions of Mt. Etna. St. Agatha is the one to whom they look for protection against the volcanic eruptions.

The history of this virgin martyr dates back to the early Roman period. The martyrdom of St. Agatha is not authenticated, and we possess no reliable information concerning the details of her glorious death. If there is a kernel of historical truth in the narrative it has not as yet been possible to sift it out from the later embellishments. The information at hand shows that Agatha, daughter of a distinguished family and remarkable for her beauty of person, was persecuted by the Senator Quintianus with avowed love. His proposals were resolutely spurned by the pious Christian virgin, he committed her to the charge of an evil woman, whose seductive arts, however, were baffled by Agatha's unwavering firmness in the Christian faith. Quintianus then had her subjected to various cruel tortures. Especially inhuman seemed his order to have her breasts cut off a detail which furnished to the Christian medieval iconography the peculiar characteristic of Agatha. But the holy virgin was consoled by a vision of St. Peter, who miraculously cured her. Eventually she succumbed to the repeated cruelties practised on her.

Both Catania and Palermo claim the honor of being Agatha's birthplace. Her feast is kept on February 5; her office in the Roman breviary is drawn in part from the Latin Acts. Catania honors St. Agatha as her patron saint, and throughout the region around Mt. Etna she is invoked against the eruption of the volcano, as elsewhere against fire and lightning.

Around Mt. Etna are woven so many interesting legends that it is impossible to go into many of the details. The fact that the earthquake and the severe eruptions are closely connected brings back vividly the poetic description of Mt. Etna. According to Greek tradition, the imprisoned deep Oceanus, who was bound by Typhoeus, his right hand placed under Pelorus, his left hand beneath Pachynus, while he pressed down his head, vomited flame from his raging mouth, struggling to throw off the earth, and to roll away cities and huge mountains from off his body. When the monster thus bestirred himself, the earth trembles, the King of the Shades is himself in dread lest it may be opened, the ground be parted with a wide chasm, and the repeated cruelties practised on her.

BOON TO HORSES

New Type of Horseshoe, Prevents Them From Slipping.

If horses had means of expressing their thanks they would probably unite and send a resolution of gratitude to the Pennsylvania man who invented the horseshoe shown in the sketch. And horses do have such an edifying idea in devising a method of preventing their feet from slipping. The horseshoe has a series of parallel ridges on its heel and on portions. The ridges on the toe portion run parallel to the longitudinal axis of the shoe and those on the heel portion run transversely. These ridges form a series of "scoops" adapted to receive and retain snow or dirt, thus forming a cushioning surface for the shoe and making the horse safer of his footing. Running in opposite directions, as they do, the corrugations act as a sort of brake in whichever way the animal's feet may happen to slip and the whole effect is to prevent snow or dirt "packing" on the flat of the shoe.

STATE LEAGUE HAS BEEN REORGANIZED

Appleton and Racine Take the Place of Wausau and La Crosse in Wisconsin-Illinois Association of Baseball Clubs.

Appleton takes the place of Wausau, and Racine the place of La Crosse in the Wisconsin-Illinois Association of Baseball Clubs.

At the special meeting of the board of directors of the league at the Davidson hotel, Milwaukee, last night the franchises of La Crosse and Wausau were purchased by Racine and Appleton, respectively.

Racine was represented by W. H. Armstrong, city clerk, who has been a most active factor in the Lake Shore league since last year. Messrs. Steel, Shannon and Frank came as representatives of Appleton.

Meeting is Harmonious.

Every league city was represented at the meeting, which passed off harmoniously under the gavel of President Charles F. Mott of Milwaukee. The transfer of the two franchises detracted none but added much to the popularity of the league, and every representative went home satisfied with the result of the changes.

The meeting lasted until 11 o'clock. The matter of franchises was the most important to come before the league directors in some time, and there was a full discussion from every viewpoint as the changes involved needed.

The matter required so much time that the schedule and salary limit propositions received no attention. Adjournment was taken until Jan. 31, when these matters will be definitely decided.

The new league cities' representatives seemed exceedingly happy after the meeting, and were perhaps the most enthusiastic of any members of the gathering in the lobby of the Davidson.

Will Get Busy at Once.

Mr. Armstrong of Racine and the Appleton men expressed great satisfaction over the result of the meeting and the confirmation of the purchases of the franchises, and said they would get busy at once to get things in shape for an active and profitable season. There is no doubt that both of the new cities will work their hardest to make a good showing for their first seasons. None of the representatives would discuss his plans at this time.

"The league is stronger today than it ever has been," said a director. "As it stands now it is more compact than before and easier to handle. Traveling expenses will be reduced considerably, connections made more easily, and in short it will be more satisfactory all around."

Valuable Conch Shells.

The conch shell is highly prized in India. In many of the temples they are blown daily to scare away the malignant spirits while the god receives his daily meal. A conch with the spiral twisting to the right instead of to the left is supposed to be worth its weight in gold. Some years ago a conch of that description was offered for sale in Calcutta, with a reserve price of a lakh of rupees placed on it. It was eventually bought in for $20,000.

Preserving City Records.

There is a city history club in New York that is doing good work, the object being to gather all the data possible in regard to historical facts in the life of the city. Some of the late collections include real Elizabethan chains, ashes of Columbus in a gold cross and historical portraits of early Dutch in New York.

MOTHER SAVES BOY BY PROMPT MEASURE

Little Deloit Boy Drank Poison But Suffered No Serious Results From It.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Deloit, Jan. 18.—Ray White, the two and a half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Theophilus White, nearly died this morning from drinking poison from a bottle he found while playing around on the floor of his parents' home. His mother saw him place a bottle of Rhinoceros and promptly gave him child-atonic, coffee, which sickened it. Physicians called stated that no serious results would follow.

The Women of the World held their annual meeting and installation of officers Saturday night. A class of thirty-six were initiated and members of the order from Janesville, Clinton and Brodhead were guests at a banquet that followed the ceremonies.

Warmth and Illumination Needed.

A philosophy without heart and a faith without intellect are abstractions from the true life and being of knowledge and faith. The man whom philosophy leaves cold, and the man whom real faith does not illumine, may be assured that the fault lies in themselves, not in knowledge and faith. The former is still an alien from philosophy, the latter an alien from faith. —Hegel.

On the Value of Experience.

The learning thou gettest by thine own observation and experience is far beyond that thou gettest by precept, as the knowledge of a traveler exceeds that which is got by reading. —Thomas a Kempis.

LISTEN, PROSPECTIVE BUYERS!

Are You Going to Buy An Automobile?

If so, stop and think a moment before purchasing, and then ask yourself, is this automobile a standard make and manufactured by a reliable and substantial concern, or is it one I nor my neighbor know nothing about and so called an experiment, therefore why not buy an automobile built by one of the oldest, largest, strongest and most reliable manufacturers in the world? So here you are. It is the BUICK which is built in Flint and Jackson, Mich. The Buick is not a car which has gained its great reputation by advertising. No, it has gained its whole reputation by the perfect satisfaction it has given to the Buick owners.

ASK ANY BUICK OWNER

and he will convince any fair-minded person of the practicability and reliability of his Buick car.

Just for instance we call your attention to this one event which will prove that when you own a Buick you not only own ONE of the best cars in America, but you really own THE best, so this is the best of proof by a Buick Model 10, 4 cylinder, ignition magneto and batteries for reserve, 5 lamps complete with tools.

BUICK MODEL 10

Won First Place Among American Cars and Second Place in International Light Car Road Race

After leading the entire first half of what proved to be the most exciting and most stubbornly fought speed battle in automobile racing history, the Buick Model 10's gasoline tank came loose and because of stops totaling over twenty minutes from this trouble, the Buick lost the 196 mile Savannah race by six minutes.

Hilliard in his $3,300 Lancia won and all credit is due him. Burman in his $1,000 Buick gave him the fight of his life and brought his car in with such a lead over the remaining contestants that there was no question concerning the standard which the Buick has set in low-priced automobile construction.

The greatest duel between the leaders was a sight which the spectators will never forget.

NOTES ON THE RACE

The Buick used was a regular stock chassis except that for the sake of securing less clearance, the frame and machinery were under hung. Our regular motor, transmission and axle parts were used.

During the entire race, the hood over the engine was not raised.

Michelin tires were used and absolutely no tire trouble was had.

70 miles per hour was made on the smooth straight-away stretches.

The three fastest laps made in the race were made by the Buick.

The Buick made each of 17 laps in less than 11 minutes. The length of each lap was 9.8 miles.

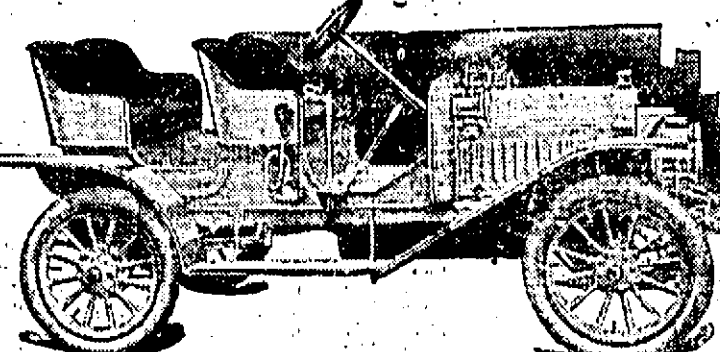

The fastest lap of the race was made by the Buick in 10 minutes and 8 seconds.

NOW, MR. PROSPECT, all we ask of you is to come and let us demonstrate to you and then you will be thoroughly convinced and your doubt will no longer be a question. When you buy a car you not only want the right car but you want the right treatment. We assure you both.

Yours for service, square deals, and courteous treatment,

PRIELIP BROS.
